THE FATE OF BOSNY.

Hearing that the little town of Rosny, ed yesterday and this morning, writes a war correspondent of the London Times, we resolved to go and see it. An artilleryman pointed out the road, declaring that we might follow it safely enough if thought it advisable to walk, but bud no stance, I should say that it must be easy enough to get out of the way of a shell if a man does not stand upon his dignity, but is ready to throw himself upon his face or rush into the nearest hole.

We left the road immediately at the double, and making a circuit to the left across country got down to Roany, with his across country got down to Roany, with the part areal incurring any rush although the shells from both batterie kept up an in-cessant whistling match high above our public man is endowed with a good degree of vanity, he is made happy by the respect his station procures him; if he is ambitious, he is made happy by the opportunity afforded him of gratifying that administration of the state nevoleut wisnes. I will not say mat from each of these sources I have not derived some enjoyment, but if I do not misjudge myselt, it has been less than most others would have felt in my situation. This implies an opinion that I have less vanity and less ambition than most other men. The indulgence of this opinion you an-embulance, and when was filled with wounded. the point of being moved, however, to Paris by railway train, the whistle of which considerably astonished us, as it was apparently within easy range of the Prussian guns, and could have been knocked to pieces by a single cannon, until we noticed that it was protected by the red

One house, indeed, at Rosny had been terribly knocked about. It had been, perhaps, the handsomest house there, and the Prussians may have found out that it was the headquarters of the Franch staff. At any rate it had been for fome reason the special chieft of their sengance for while the houses all around remained untouched this had been made utterly uninhabitable,

The English courts hold the railroad nience and the public safety. A case of long standing has recently been tried in the court of exchequer, the result of which is a case in point. A reason ticketholder found the advertised train not going to start, in consequence of the fireman Office, we own the sole approximately states of Trans-Atlantic steamers.

The solid approximately distinction which deserves the name of fame without matter takents, large acquirements, sagarity, prudence, and a sound judgment. Many claim a fair share of these, and those who think they have them, in an eminent degree are the most likely to be migrated. who think they have them, in an eminent an action for the recovery of the money degree are the most likely to be mistaken.

Or myown endowments in these respects I shall only "ay, I have enough of prudence and judgment not to indulge even in a conjectural estimate of the zhare of saked.

I shall only "ay, I have enough of prudence and judgment not to indulge even jury gave the plaintiff a verdict for all he saked. then which I possess.

You may think that I am rather prematurely summing up the cause before all the facts are brought out, but I think the testimony is closed. My spring and summer are past, and I have advanced far into the autumn of life. It would be folly for me to think of sowing seed for another the autumn of hie. It would be folly for mo to think of sowing seed for another harvest. At most, I can only glean a little longer in the old fields. I mether see a prospect nor seel a desire of returning again to public life. Nor am I unhappy at all that it is so. Begging you to make a proper allowance for the very great difference between myself and Sir William Temple; I shall conclude my letter by borrowing the concluding paragraph of his memours, which was, I think, written about the same period.

must remain in this inclive home, and wait, she knows not for what. She sees that for a lifetime she is to be subjected to an experiment more cruel than that of the mouse placed in the exhausted receiver of the air pump. The life of fiber body will continue, but only to watch the slowly wasting life of her spirit.

No position is more pathetic than this. What is the dread of inture punishment when the dread of inture punishment is comparison with the present starvation in comparison with the present starvation is more simple, but equally interesting. The matrix the dread of inture punishment is the dread of inture punishment in comparison with the present starvation. What is the dread of inture punishment in comparison with the present starvation of the soul? We do not anticipate an inexpressible misery, nor expect to as present fact; but it exists in the but and purest households rather than in the most. It exists in the cramped homes

Record. The Newburgh (N. Y.) Mercury says:
Mr. R. Cole, who is now running a passenger engine on the Newburgh Short Cut:
Railroad, has been following his present occupation since the year 1851. During that time he has traveled 585,255 miles, which had it here on exceptionals. which, had it been on one continuo straight line, would have taken him arou the world twenty-three and one-hal times. Mr. Cole has kept a record of the different casualties which have occurred while he has been engaged in this basi-ness. This shows the killing of two persons by running over them while walkin on the track, and, as they were both females, exhibits Mr. Cole as a kind o railroad Binebeard. It also shows that h sheep, twenty-four cattle, seventeen hogs four horses, and a great many railroad ties
